include, but are not limited to: Google applications such as “Classroom” and “Meet,” online textbook subscriptions, and Genesis. At the outset of the current crisis, on the last day of on-campus schooling, students brought home their textbooks and materials.

2. Some exceptions have been for the few students who are without internet access, on which the district continues to work with a goal of providing 100% access. In those cases, hard copies of guided learning experiences re being provided by the teaching staff.

3. Teachers will modify lessons and materials for students with accommodations according to their IEP/504 plans. Teachers will be monitoring their emails during school hours to answer questions.

B. As each student is issued a Chromebook, daily assignments and activities will be provided via internet using Google Classroom, e-mail, online textbook subscriptions, and other common applications that are already used in school-based instruction.

1. Teacher websites will also provide information regarding assignments.

2. Weekly lesson plans will continue to be completed and inspected by supervisors

3. Assignments will be: given due dates, collected, graded, and posted to Genesis.

4. Department supervisors will check daily to ensure that standards are being instructed.

C. Daily instructional hours: students and teachers will be online for instruction from 10:00 am to 2:00 pm on Monday through Friday.

1. Teachers will be available online during normal school hours to answer questions through Google, e-mail, and other common applications.

2. Families without internet access can make notes on their child’s work with specific questions and that work can be completed upon the student’s return to school.

D. Special education resource room teachers will be setting up ways to continue the learning process with students, as the general education teachers are doing.

1. Special education teachers in “in-class support” settings are doing their best to work with general education teachers to ensure that students are keeping on track of assignments and that they are getting what they need to do those assignments, tests and quizzes. In this way, for our resource room and “in-class support” students, IEP goals and objectives are being implemented and followed.

2. All IEP and 504 accommodations will be addressed in materials/packets sent home with students. Parents who feel their child’s modifications are not appropriate can e-mail the special education teacher and the work can be adjusted.

3. Students in our special education resource room classes are accessing their remote classrooms through google classrooms. Their teachers are utilizing google meet, slides presentations, videos, etc. to educate them. The teachers have been flexible with the particular needs of the students at this time (i.e. work schedules, caring for younger siblings, etc.) and learning has gone on as usual, with all IEP accommodations and modifications accounted for.

4. For the more self-contained special education rooms (i.e. LLD, Life Skills, etc.), students will receive packets of work that will be sent home, due to their learning being much more hands-on. These teachers will attempt to communicate with parents via telephone or email, if the students are having issues with any of the work.

5. Self-Contained Students (LLD, Life Skills and Cognitive Severe Classrooms) IEP goals and objectives are being addressed with our three self-contained classrooms as well. Teachers are having daily google meets with their students, and incorporating our transition services coordinator and related service providers into their lessons as well. Teachers continue to keep track of goals and objectives for their students, to the greatest extent possible without face to face contact with students.

a. Related service providers, including speech, occupational therapy and physical therapy have been working on goals and objectives with students and their parents to try to prevent regression at this time, also to the greatest extent possible.

b. Students will be evaluated upon returning to school to check for regression in skills, and accommodated at that time.

c. All related services are being tracked by the providers, as well as all information and work that is sent home.

6. Job sites will resume once the school is back in session.

7. We are working with our Out-Of-District placements to set up plans for students who attend.

8. Families without e-mail access can make notes on their child's work with specific questions and the work can be completed upon the student's return to school.

IV. ENGLISH LANGUAGE LEARNERS

A. The course continues to develop students' communication skills in English. Although the spoken word is no longer the central medium of instruction, the instructor makes herself available for one-to-one interactions and Google Meets; classes that are "live" via Google Meet begin with some type of oral discussion. She implements grammar and writing assignments through Everyday English & Keys to Good Language and Wordly Wise, multi-leveled sources that directly measure content and skill; personal writings/responses play a major role in the format of the class. Google Classroom displays assignments, schedules, and teacher information, while cataloging student work for revision and assessment.

B. The school communicates through Google Classroom, Genesis, Honeywell, email, and phone. Most ELLs and their families satisfactorily receive information through these means. A small group has not logged on or completed work since distance learning began. Emails and phone calls from both the instructor and guidance counselors to parents/guardians have been used, and students' attendance is monitored through Genesis's self-reporting function.

C. As our school has a 1:1 Google Chromebook/student ratio, the instructor uses Google Suite to best meet students' needs. She encourages them to use online Spanish-to English translation sites, both as primary sources and to proofread material. Second, and sometimes third, chances are provided to fix/edit/correct submissions on Google Docs, respectful of teacher feedback. Emphasis is placed on the more personal aspects of students' lives and culture, specifically choosing topics that produce authentic writing.
